DISCUSSION AND CORRESPONDENCE

A MODERN TEXT-BOOK OF GEOLOGY—AND EVOLUTION

TIME, after all, is a matter of relativity for most of us. To-day, under circumstances, may really be yesterday. A little scientific book of the time of the middle of last century—a few years, say, after the publication of Darwin's "Origin"—has just come under my eyes. But it could not have come much before because its title page bears the imprint, "Quebec, 1913."

It is a little text-book (in French) of geology: "Abrégé de Géologie, par L'Abbe V.-A. Huard, A.M., Directeur du Naturaliste Canadien, Conservateur du Musée de l'Instruction Publique, et Entomologiste officiel de la Province de Quebec."

It is one of a series of similar books by the same author (zoology, botany, mineralogy, geology) which form a "Cours abrégé d'histoire naturelle, à l'usage des maisons d'éducation." It is, in other words, an introduction and guide to science for the rising generation of French Canadians.

It comprises six chapters about the earth's crust, the agents that modify it and the fossils that lie in it; and a seventh divided into two articles: "Art. 1, L'histoire primitive du genre humain; Art. 2, Ce qu'il faut penser du transformisme." It is this last chapter particularly that seizes one's attention.

The first paragraph of the first article concerns the "age of the human species." It is as follows:
