

AAAS Officers, Committees, and Representatives for 1962

The following persons are serving as officers, as members of the indicated committees, and as representatives to other organizations for the year 1962. The dates in parentheses indicate the year of expiration of terms of election or appointment.

General Officers

Retiring President and Chairman of the Board of Directors: Thomas Park (1962), University of Chicago

President: Paul M. Gross (1963), Duke University

President-Elect: Alan T. Waterman (1964), National Science Foundation

Other Members of the Board of Directors

Harrison Brown (1963), California Institute of Technology

Henry Eyring (1965), University of Utah

H. Bentley Glass (1962), Johns Hopkins University

Margaret Mead (1962), American Museum of Natural History

Don K. Price (1964), Harvard University

Mina Rees (1964), City University of New York

Alfred S. Romer (1963), Harvard University

William W. Rubey (1965), University of California, Los Angeles

Paul A. Scherer (ex officio), National Science Foundation

Dael Wolfle (ex officio), AAAS

Vice Presidents and Chairmen of the Sections

Mathematics: H. Frederic Bohnenblust, California Institute of Technology

Physics: Marsh W. White, Osmond Laboratory, Pennsylvania State University

Chemistry: Richard H. Wilhelm, Princeton University

Astronomy: Frank K. Edmondson, Goethe Link Observatory, Indiana University

Geology and Geography: Guy-Harold Smith, Ohio State University

Zoological Sciences: Ernst W. Caspari, University of Rochester

Botanical Sciences: John N. Couch, University of North Carolina

Anthropology: William S. Laughlin, University of Wisconsin

Psychology: Arthur W. Melton, University of Michigan

Social and Economic Sciences: Simon S. Kuznets, Harvard University

History and Philosophy of Science: Gerald Holton, Harvard University

Engineering: Clarence E. Davies,

United Engineering Center Project, New York, N.Y.

Medical Sciences: DeWitt Stetten, Jr., National Institute of Arthritis and Metabolic Diseases, Bethesda, Md.

Dentistry: Ned B. Williams, University of Pennsylvania School of Dentistry

Pharmaceutical Sciences: John Aultian, University of Texas

Agriculture: George W. Irving, Jr., Agricultural Research Service, Washington, D.C.

Industrial Science: Henry F. Dever, Minneapolis-Honeywell Regulator Company, Minneapolis

Education: Kenneth E. Anderson, University of Kansas

Information and Communication: George L. Seielstad, Johns Hopkins University Applied Physics Laboratory, Silver Spring, Md.

Administrative Officers

Executive Officer: Dael Wolfle

Treasurer: Paul A. Scherer

Associate Administrative Secretary: Raymond L. Taylor

Editor: Graham DuShane

Business Manager: Hans Nussbaum

Director of Education: John R. Mayor

Director, Science Library Program: Hilary J. Deason

Director of studies on the public understanding of science: Edward G. Sherburne, Jr.

Secretaries of the Sections

Mathematics: Wallace Givens (1964), Northwestern University

Physics: Stanley S. Ballard (1963), University of Florida

Chemistry: S. L. Meisel (1964), Soco Mobil Oil Company, Paulsboro, N.J.

Astronomy: Frank Bradshaw Wood (1965), Flower and Cook Observatory, University of Pennsylvania

Geology and Geography: Richard H. Mahard (1964), Denison University

Zoological Sciences: David W. Bishop (1965), Carnegie Institution of Washington, Baltimore

Botanical Sciences: Harriet B. Creighton (1963), Wellesley College

Anthropology: Eleanor Leacock (1965), Bank Street College of Education, Brooklyn, N.Y.

Henry Eyring

Psychology: Frank W. Finger (1963), University of Virginia

Social and Economic Sciences: Donald P. Ray (1962), National Institute of Social and Behavioral Science, 863 Benjamin Franklin Station, Washington 4, D.C.

History and Philosophy of Science: N. Russell Hanson (1965), Indiana University

Engineering: Leroy K. Wheelock (1964), Engineers Joint Council, New York, N.Y.

Medical Sciences: Oscar Touster (1964), Vanderbilt University School of Medicine

Dentistry: Reidar F. Sognaes (1962), University of California School of Dentistry, Los Angeles

Pharmaceutical Sciences: John E. Christian (1962), Purdue University School of Pharmacy

Agriculture: Howard B. Sprague (1965), Pennsylvania State University

Industrial Science: Allen T. Bonnell (1964), Drexel Institute of Technology

Education: Herbert A. Smith (1963), University of Kansas

Information and Communication: Phyllis V. Parkins (1965), Biological Abstracts, Philadelphia

Statistics: Morris B. Ullman (1965), 7604 Cayuga Avenue, Bethesda, Md.

Officers of the Alaska Division

President: James W. Brooks, Alaska Department of Fish and Game, Juneau

President-Elect: Allan H. Mick, Agricultural Experiment Station, Palmer

Secretary: Anne Sosnkowski, Alaska Historical Museum, Juneau

Executive Secretary: George Dahlgren, Jr., University of Alaska, College

Council Representative: Victor P. Hessler, University of Alaska, College

Officers of the Pacific Division

President: Melvin Calvin, University of California, Berkeley

President-Elect: John P. Tully, Pacific Biological Station, Nanaimo, B.C.

Retiring President: W. A. Clemens, University of British Columbia, Vancouver

Secretary: Robert C. Miller, California Academy of Sciences, San Francisco

Council Representative: Robert C. Miller

Officers of the Southwestern and Rocky Mountain Division

President: Anton H. Berkman, Texas Western College

President-Elect: Edwin R. Helwig, University of Colorado

Executive Secretary: Marlowe G. Anderson, New Mexico State University, University Park

Council Representative: Marlowe G. Anderson

Editorial Board

Graham DuShane, AAAS, chairman
Konrad B. Krauskopf (1963), Stanford University

Edwin M. Lerner (1964), National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Md.

Philip M. Morse (1965), Massachusetts Institute of Technology

New Section on Communication

Phyllis V. Parkins

Communication of information between scientists and between scientists and interested laymen stems back to the earliest beginnings of scientific societies and organized teaching. From the time of the founding of the Association in 1848, with its emphasis on interdisciplinary contacts, there have been AAAS members and groups of scientists with a particular interest in communication. The problems of writing, editing, and citing scientific papers existed a century ago. As the sciences expanded and as scientific societies proliferated and split into increasingly specialized organizations, as journals increased, and as the flood of scientific contributions multiplied, the problems of communication, storage, and retrieval of data and of concepts became acute.

Articles on the subject in Science and papers at AAAS meetings are too numerous to cite, but a time is approaching when the situation will become critical. At the meeting of the AAAS in Philadelphia in 1951 there were two sessions on Soviet science, arranged by Conway Zirkle, and a general symposium of three sessions, "Operation knowledge," organized by William F. Hewitt, Jr. This latter program was co-sponsored by seven AAAS sections, by the American Library Association and the Special Libraries Association, and by the chemical literature division of the American Chemical Society. At the St. Louis meeting of 1952 an informal conference on scientific editorial problems was organized by Marian Fine- man, then chief of the editorial branch, Technical Operations, Dugway Proving Ground, Utah. Six excellent papers were read and discussed. The conference became a recurrent event at the Association's annual meeting. Consistent with a broadening of the scope of the conference was the change of name to the Conference on Scientific Communi- cation, after 1957, when George Seiel- stad became chairman of the steering committee. The 9th conference, in New York, in December 1960, was devoted to a four-session symposium, "The sci- ences in Communist China." This was a distinguished program, sponsored jointly with the AAAS as a whole and co- sponsored by ten societies and institutes and by the National Science Founda- tion, which had made possible the as- sociated large translation and microfilm- ing project.

The intensifying interest in, and need for, scientific information and commu- nication continued. At least ten of the AAAS affiliates were concerned in these areas, and there were other organiza- tions in this field, it was thought, that might seek affiliation with the Associa- tion. In the spring of 1961 it was suggested to Chauncey Leake that perhaps the time was ripe for the founding of an AAAS section on information and communication. It was pointed out that the AAAS was an organization singularly fitted to bring together the diverse societies and interests in this rapidly growing and complex field. Dr. Leake received the suggestion with enthusiasm; it was considered by the AAAS Board of Directors, which unanimously voted to recommend approval of the new section to the Council of the Association.

Representatives of societies thought to be particularly interested and a few key people from federal agencies especially interested in information and communication were invited to partici- pate in a planning and organizing ses- sion in Washington on 8 October 1961. Those present agreed that programs of the new section should be planned with the primary objective of interesting sci- entists and communication specialists in each other's problems, to their mu- tual advantage.

Dr. Leake offered his plan for an afternoon program at the AAAS meet- ing in Denver, at what probably would be the last session of the Conference on Scientific Communication and the in- auguration of the new section.

The AAAS Council unanimously ap- proved the recommendation of the Board of Directors to establish the As- sociation's 19th section, on informa- tion and communication (Section T).

At a luncheon given on 30 December for those interested in communication, Dr. Leake informally outlined the back- ground and goals of the new section. Later, to the larger group assembled for the afternoon session, he announced the Board's appointment of Phyllis V. Parkins (of Biological Abstracts) as section secretary. He presented the name of George L. Seielstad (Applied Physics Laboratory, Johns Hopkins), who had been chairman of the former Conference on Scientific Communi-
