New DC DEFIBRILLATOR gives you the LATEST METHOD for treatment of ventricular fibrillation

The New External DC Defibrillator* from American Optical Company is the only commercially available instrument that features a direct current countershock for treatment of ventricular fibrillation. High voltage capacitor provides stored energy source . . . makes DC discharge possible . . . increases safety, dependability and accuracy.

Extremely short (2.5 milliseconds) DC discharge is safer because it reduces probability of heart muscle damage. Stored energy source is safely limited . . . prevents accidental delivery of unlimited electrical energy to patient or operator. Capacitor provides more dependable, constant energy source that cannot be affected by AC line overload, voltage drop or fuse burn out. You have precise control over shock intensity which is always registered on easy-to-read meter.

The DC method of countershock offered by the new AO External DC Defibrillator provides many additional advantages. Write for complete information.

*Developed in cooperation with Dr. Bernard Lown, Department of Nutrition, Harvard University, School of Public Health.

Distributed through authorized AO Medical Electronics representatives only.
