Hydrology

Hydrologie de Surface. M. Roche. Gauthier-Villars, Paris, 1963. 430 pp. Illus. $15.50.

The author is an engineer, a hydrologist, with Électricite de France, and his book is cosponsored by the Office de la Recherche Scientifique et Technique Outre-Mer (ORSTOM). Basically the book is a manual of procedure intended to supplement Remenieras's L'Hydrologie de l'Ingenieur. Together the two provide a French language treatment of hydrology which presents the methods commonly used by French hydrologists, especially with respect to hydrological problems in tropical areas. It is gratifying to see some summarization of hydrology as it is practiced outside of the United States.

The greater part of the text is divided about evenly between the statistical treatment of data and techniques for instrumentation and measurement. Relatively little space is devoted to the analytical techniques that are stressed in American books on hydrology. One chapter is devoted to base-flow recessions, four pages to flood routing, and almost nothing to relations between storm rainfall and runoff. The brief chapter on analytical hydrology is devoted to the unit hydrograph. Other chapters treat the use of statistics in hydrology, precipitation, evaporation and evapotranspiration, basin morphology, hydrometry, hydrometric data, station networks, floods in large basins, the frequency of annual precipitation and streamflow, sediment transport, and special methods for desert regions.

Techniques used by ORSTOM in the French-speaking countries of Africa are emphasized. The American reader will find few basically new concepts, but he will note some significant differences in viewpoint, with respect to both instrumentation and methods of analysis. He will be interested, for example, in the emphasis on index watersheds, the formal mathematical treatment of some concepts of hydrology, and the use of chemical methods for gaging streams.

The book is liberally illustrated with examples from African watersheds, particularly on the Niger, and it provides an opportunity to compare tropical regimes with those of temperate areas. An appendix contains a brief summary of French equivalents for the common English terms used in hydrology.

RAY K. LINSLEY

Stanford University

Interstellar Space

Soviet Science of Interstellar Space. S. Pikelner. Translated from the Russian by Mary Zirin. Philosophical Library, New York, 1963. 320 pp. Illus. $7.50.

The title of the book is somewhat misleading, because the author gives a fair account of past and present developments without restricting himself to, or even overemphasizing, the Soviet work. The five main chapters deal with planetary nebulae, diffuse nebulae, the interstellar gas, galactic magnetic fields, and evolutionary problems. The year of publication of the Russian text is not indicated, but new material published in 1958 and 1959 is included.

It is somewhat difficult to determine the audience to which the book is addressed. Hardly any equations are used. An elementary account of some basic physics and astronomy precedes the first chapter. But it is doubtful whether the rest of the book is suitable for the person who does not have already some knowledge of the basic physics involved. And it would seem that one who is able to grasp the contents of the book, might have profited from a somewhat more mathematical approach as well as from considerably more figures. Still, the book provides in a brief space much information, also on rather advanced topics, and appears quite suitable for scientists from related fields, who are interested in these subjects, and for students who are seeking a short summary of material that will be discussed more extensively in a course on the subject.

The style is generally satisfactory, but the translation seems only moderately successful. A case like the one on page 45 is not exceptional. It is stated that "We can expect deviations in hundreds of times," but from the context it is apparent that deviations by a factor of a hundred are meant.

L. Woltjer

Department of Physics, University of Maryland

Notes

Industrial Science

Douglas Fisher's The Epic of Steel (Harper and Row, New York, 1963. 354 pp. $6.75) is a factual account of developments in the technology of iron and steel from prehistoric times to the present, which both the specialist and the general reader will find interesting. No other book provides such a complete description of the iron and steel industry in America from Colonial times to the Space Age. Fisher's scholarly, well-documented account brings home to the reader the extent to which the evolution of our culture was interwoven with, and dependent upon, developments in the steel industry.

The development of production methods and types of steel are emphasized, but I wish more attention had been paid to the transformations in steel and to man's mastery of the properties of steel through the control of its structure. Otherwise the book is quite complete—it even provides a description of the development of synthetic chemicals and plastics from the chemical by-products of the iron and steel industry's coke ovens. One chapter, "Steelmaking processes-twentieth century," contains an up-to-the-minute review of the many new variations in steelmaking processes. This book fills a gap in the written record, and it should be widely read.

O. C. SHEPARD

Department of Materials Science, Stanford University

Physical Chemistry Data

Scientists, engineers, and technical information specialists will welcome the Consolidated Index of Selected Property Values: Physical Chemistry and Thermodynamics (Prepared by the Office of Critical Tables. NAS-NRC Publ. No. 976. National Academy of Sciences-National Research Council, Washington, D.C., 1962. 297 pp. $6). The volume provides a centralized guide to the detailed contents of six well-known and important physicochemical and thermodynamic data compilations. Listed are some 12,000 substances; index entries are arranged by formula, according to a logical system based on the periodic table. The names of properties and publications are coded and in semitabular format. Machine processing of this highly condensed material can be readily conceived, using the coded index entries. The consolidated index makes it possible to determine at a glance which of some 73 properties have been compiled, and in what publication the data for each substance are tabulated. As additional areas are included in future volumes, the OCT Consolidated Index series will rank as one of the most important central reference sources. The present volume will prove most useful, and is highly recommended to all having need for "best" numerical property values.

GEORGE J. JANZ

Department of Chemistry, Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute

Geologic Map

The Geologic Map of New York, 1961, prepared by the New York State Geological Survey (New York State Museum and Science Service, Albany, 1962. 5 maps. 10 pp. Illus. $11), the first new geologic map of New York State in three-score years, is not only a splendid scientific achievement in mapping, but the accompanying text provides a brief, comprehensive, geologic history of the area.

The map itself is in five sheets, each about 21/2 by 3 feet in size. An enormous amount of information is presented, with respect to the kinds of rock, their ages, and their distribution within the State. The rocks are divided into 168 map units.

Geologic history, step-by-step, is in four sheets of text. Diagrams and figures of many kinds make the history both simple and interesting. A physiographic diagram of the State is an unexpected bonus. But note: to get the map and text, one must order the complete map folio, at $11, not the separate map sheets, at $2 each (details from the Museum).

All that is needed now is a sevenarmed Martian to handle the folio in a high wind, on a loose talus slope. Of course, Earth Men can take separate, folded sheets into the field.

LINCOLN DRYDEN

Department of Geology, Bryn Mawr College

New Books

Mathematics, Physical Sciences, and Engineering

Advances in Heterocyclic Chemistry. vol. 1. A. R. Katritizky, Ed. Academic Press, New York, 1963. 488 pp. Illus. $15.

Analytic Geometry. R. S. Underwood and Fred W. Sparks. Houghton Mifflin, Boston, ed. 3, 1963. 313 pp. Illus. $4.75.

Basic Concepts of Nuclear Chemistry.

Ralph T. Overman. Chapman and Hall,

London; Reinhold, New York, 1963. 128 pp. Illus. Paper, $1.95.

Basic Electricity. Prepared by Bureau of Naval Personnel. Dover, New York 1960), 1962. 462 pp. Illus. Paper, Beziehungen Zwischen den Physikalisch-Chemischen Eigenschaften und der Wirkung von Lokalanästhetica. Jakob Buchi and Xavier Perlia. Editio Cantor, Württemberg, Germany, 1963. 284 pp. Illus.

The Chemistry of the Lanthanides. Therald Moeller. Reinhold, New York; Chapman and Hall, London, 1963. 127 pp. Illus. Paper, $1.95.

Continued Fractions. C. D. Olds. Random House, New York, 1963. 170 pp. Illus. Paper, $1.95.

Cosmic Rays. A. W. Wolfendale. Philosophical Library, New York, 1963. 232 pp. Illus. $10.

A Course in Higher Geodesy. Spheroidal geodesy and fundamentals of gravimetry and practical astronomy. P. S. Zakatov. Translated from the Russian. Pubfor the U.S. National Science Foundation by the Israel Program for Scientific Translations, ed. 2. 1962 (order from the Office of Technical Services, U.S. Department of Commerce, Washington, D.C.). 400 pp. Illus. Paper, $4.

Crystal Data. Determinative tables. J. D. H. Donnay and Gabrielle Donnay, Eds. American Crystallographic Assoc., 1963 (order from Polycrystal Book Service, Brooklyn, N.Y.). 1312 pp. $20.

Dynamics and Thermodynamics of Planetary Entry. W. H. T. Loh. Prentices Hall, Englewood Cliffs, N.J., 1963. 284 pp. Illus.

Electrochemistry. Theoretical principles and practical applications. Giulio Milazzo. Translated from the Italian by P. J. Mill. Elsevier, New York, 1963. 724 pp. Illus. $20.

Electron Scattering and Nuclear and Nucleon Structure. A collection of reprints with an introduction. Robert Hofstadter. Benjamin, New York, 1963. 704 pp. Illus. Paper, $6.95; cloth, $10.

Electronic Circuits and Instrumentation Systems. Jack J. Studer. Wiley, New York, 1963. 437 pp. Illus. $10.75.

Encyclopaedic Dictionary of Physics.

vol. 6, Radiation, Continuous to Stellar Luminosity. J. Thewlis, Ed. Macmillan, New York; Pergamon, London, 883 pp. Illus.

Ergebnisse der Angewandten Mathematik. F. L. Bauer, Ed. vol. 8, Antiplane Elastic Systems, L. M. Milne-Thomson. Springer, Berlin; Academic Press, New York, 1962. 273 pp. Illus. Paper, $11.

Exploring the Atmosphere. G. M. B. Dobson. Oxford Univ. Press, New York, 1963. 200 pp. Illus. $3.40.

Flight Performance Handbook for Orbital Operations. Orbital mechanics and astrodynamic formulae, theorems, techniques, and applications. Raymond W. Wolverton, Ed. Wiley, New York, 1963. Unpaged. Illus. $25.

Les Fondements de la Mécanique Statistique Classique et Quantique. R. Jancel. Gauthier-Villars, Paris, 1963. 330 pp. Illus. Paper, NF. 70.

A Fortran Primer. Elliott I. Organick. Addison-Wesley, Reading, Mass., 1963. 192 pp. Illus. Paper, $3.95.

General Stochastic Processes in the Theory of Queues. Václav E. Beneš. Addison-Wesley, Reading, Mass., 1963. 96 pp. Illus. $5.75.

Generalized Analytic Functions. I. N. Vekua. Translated from Obobshchennyye analiticheskiye funktsii (Moscow, 1959) by Ian N. Sneddon. Pergamon, London; Addison-Wesley, Reading, Mass., 1962. 698 pp. Illus. $14.75.

Graphs and Their Uses. Oystein Ore. Random House, New York, 1963. 139

pp. Illus. Paper, $1.95.

Handbook of Analytical Chemistry. Louis Meites, Ed. McGraw-Hill, New York, 1963. Unpaged. Illus. $47.50.

Heat and Its Workings. Morton Mott-Smith. Dover, New York (© 1933), 1962. 175 pp. Illus. Paper, $1.

Hydrogen in Steel. Effect of hydrogen on iron and steel during production, fabrication, and use. Michael Smialowski. Pergamon, London; Addison-Wesley, Reading, Mass., 1962. 468 pp. Illus. $10. Addison-Wesley, Ice and Snow. Properties, processes, and applications. Proceedings of a conference (Cambridge, Mass.), February 1962. W. D. Kingery, Ed., M.I.T. Press, Cambridge, Mass. 1963. 700 pp. Illus. $16.

Infrared Spectra of Inorganic and Coordination Compounds. Kazuo Nakamoto. Wiley, New York, 1963. 340 pp. Illus. $9.50.

An Introduction to Digital Computing. Bruce W. Arden. Addison-Wesley, Reading, Mass., 1963. 399 pp. Illus. $8.75.

An Introduction to Linear Programming and the Theory of Games. A. M. Glicksman. Wiley, New York, 1963. 141 pp. Illus. Paper, $2.25; cloth, $4.95.

An Introduction to Plasma Physics. W. B. Thompson. Pergamon, London; Addison-Wesley, Reading, Mass., 264 pp. Illus. $10.

An Introduction to the Calculus of Variations. L. A. Pars. Wiley, New York, 1962. 362 pp. Illus. $8.50.

An Introduction to Waves, Rays and Radiation in Plasma Media. J. J. Brandstatter. McGraw-Hill, New York, 1963. 704 pp. Illus. $15.

Introductory Mechanics. Edwin F. Taylor. Wiley, New York, 1963. 443 pp. Illus. $8.75.

Ion Exchange Separations in Analytical Chemistry. Olof Samuelson, Almqvist and Wiksell, Stockholm; Wiley, New York, 1963. 474 pp. Illus. $9.50.

The Ionosphere. Proceedings of the International Conference (London), July 1962. A. C. Stickland, Ed. Institute of Physics and the Physical Society, London, 1963 (order from Chapman and Hall, London). 538 pp. Illus.£5 5s.

Kirk-Othmer Encyclopedia of Chemical Technology. vol. 1, A to Aluminum. Herman F. Mark, John J. McKetta, Jr., and Donald F. Othmer, Eds. Interscience (Wiley), New York, ed. 2, 1963. 1010 pp. Illus. $45 each volume.

Lectures in Materials Science. Cornell Materials Science Center Lecture Series. P. J. W. Debye, N. Bloembergen, P. J. Flory, and F. Bitter. Paul Leurgans, Ed. Benjamin, New York, 1963. 121 pp. Illus. Paper, $3.95; cloth, $7.

Magnetism. E. W. Lee. Penguin Books, Baltimore, Md., 1963. 287 pp. Illus. Paper, $1.65.

Marine Sciences Instrumentation. vol. 2. Proceedings of a symposium held at