

in the form of chapters on selected subjects from eight of his British colleagues and one German investigator. All have worked in the field, and have authoritative things to say. All chapters are illustrated, some with photographs and electron micrographs, others with line drawings and graphs, still others with tables of biochemical data. All cite numerous references arranged conveniently in alphabetical order at the end of the book. The book is thus comprehensive and useful.

The editor provides introductory and final chapters that set the tone and summarize capably. He obviously has good taste and style, and his authors have either learned these good habits from him or have been preselected to fit the pattern. I know of no better recent compendium.

ARTHUR W. GALSTON
Department of Biology, Yale
University, New Haven, Connecticut

Physical Chemistry of Water

Water. A Comprehensive Treatise. FELIX FRANKS, Ed. Plenum, New York, 1973. Vol. 1, The Physics and Physical Chemistry of Water. xx, 596 pp., illus. Vol. 2, Water in Crystalline Hydrates; Aqueous Solutions of Simple Nonelectrolytes. xx, 684 pp., illus. Vol. 3, Aqueous Solutions of Simple Electrolytes. xviii, 472 pp., illus. Each volume, $37.50; by subscription, $32.50.

Everybody knows that water is the most abundant compound on the earth's surface, the principal constituent of all living organisms and the perennially largest entry in the Readers' Guide to Periodical Literature. But it may be less well known that intensive study of its detailed physical properties dates only from about 1960. As a solvent and even as a pure liquid or solid, water is an exceedingly complex substance, and until quite recently scientists have tended to avoid coming to grips with its structural features on the microscopic level.

This three-volume treatise (a fourth volume, "Aqueous Solutions of Macromolecules; Disperse Systems," is nearing completion) is easily the most ambitious and extended treatment of this ubiquitous material. The only other general reference, The Structure and Properties of Water by Eisenberg and Kauzmann, is now superseded except for its chapter on the real vapor. Because most of the research is of relatively recent origin, the 33 chapters in these volumes are much like individual contributions in the Annual Review of Physical Chemistry. All the articles in which I read closely are of remarkably high quality, quite readable, and generally useful. On the other hand, it should be realized that there is continuing controversy about and evolution in numerous topics treated, and no claim is made that all viewpoints are included. What is needed, of course, is a review of the reviews, but that is probably impossible at this stage of development. However, Franks goes a long way in providing introduction, background, and overview. His three chapters ("Water, the unique chemical"; "The properties of ice"; "The solvent properties of water") are certainly one of the most attractive and unifying features of this encyclopedia.

The first volume is devoted to water as a pure substance and to spectroscopic studies: findings of Raman, infrared, nuclear magnetic resonance, x-ray, neutron diffraction, and acoustic studies are well treated, as are the dielectric, temperature, pressure, and transport properties. I found the four theoretical chapters—on the water molecule itself by Kern and Karplus, on hydrogen bonding by Rao, on the statistical mechanics of the liquid by Ben-Naim, and on structural models by Frank—particularly enjoyable and thorough. The other two volumes treat water mixed with other molecules: in crystalline hydrates and as aqueous solutions of electrolytes and nonelectrolytes. The topics and technical methods parallel those of the first volume, but now the complex systems that underpin so much of chemical research in other areas, industrial chemistry and biology, are involved. Partly because of my own participation in a very small part of the subject, the long chapter (a monograph in its own right) "Thermodynamics of ion hydration" by Friedman and Krishnan was especially interesting to me. The quantity of data and extent of analysis were far greater than I had known existed. As I noted at the beginning, all this is of fairly recent origin, and I suspect that many scientists working in areas peripheral to, yet basically dependent upon, these topics may find these volumes an important source of insight. It is obvious that this collection is central for workers in the immediate field. Two other books that complement volumes 2 and 3 are also worth noting: Solvent Effects on Chemical Phenomena, volume 1, by E. S. Amis and J. F. Hinton (Academic Press, 1973) and The Hydrophobic Effect: Formation of Micelles and Biological Membranes by Charles Tanford (Wiley, 1973).

LELAND C. ALLEN
Department of Chemistry,
Princeton University,
Princeton, New Jersey

Resonance and Relaxation

Magnetic Resonance and Related Phenomena. Proceedings of a congress, Turku, Finland, Aug. 1972. V. HOVI, Ed. North-Holland, Amsterdam, 1973 (U.S. distributor, Elsevier, New York). xxxiv, 556 pp., illus. $47.50.

Magnetic resonance is both the subject of a discipline in its own right and a tool for the study of matter, and a conference devoted to it must deal with both of its faces. Viewing it as a form of spectroscopy, one could question its suitability as a conference topic; it is, one of the reviewer's colleagues has remarked, as if the voltmeter were the unifying theme of an international colloquium. The interplay between technical utility and intrinsic interest gives the lie to this irreverent attitude, however, and imparts vitality to the subject.

The 17th Congress Ampere continues the trend of these biennial meetings away from radio-frequency spectroscopy as a whole and toward the study of magnetic resonance and relaxation. Although no "conventional" high-resolution work was reported, the success of this technique as an analytical tool will lead many to ask if developments were presented of similar interest to a wide range of potential users. The most obvious candidate is high-resolution nuclear resonance in solids. It must be appreciated that in liquids high resolution is possible only because of the extreme narrowness of individual resonance lines; comparable linewidths in solids are difficult to obtain. Invited papers by J. S. Waugh and co-workers at MIT and E. R. Andrew at Nottingham describe two approaches to artificial line narrowing in solids and give insight into the progress made to date on this problem. It seems that at least for favorable cases a solution, with its attendant rewards, is in sight.

The range of topics, including phase transitions, quadrupole resonances, liquid crystals, organic conductors, defects in solids, and so on, is too wide to be treated here, and the reports are for the most part of interest to specialists only. I was particularly struck by the truly elegant demonstration of A. Abragam and co-workers at Saclay that resonance phenomena are not restricted to manifestations of the electromagnetic interaction. Their experiments show that the spin dependence of the nuclear strong interaction between a neutron beam and a polarized proton target can give rise to Larmor precession of the neutrons and other features of magnetic resonance. The consequences may be many for understanding of this most mysterious nuclear force.

DOUGLAS E. MACLAUGHLIN
Department of Physics,
University of California, Riverside

Books Received

The Animal in Its World. Explorations of an Ethologist 1932-1972. Vol. 2, Laboratory Experiments and General Papers. Niko Tinbergen. Harvard University Press, Cambridge, Mass., 1973. 232 pp., illus. $14.

Annual Review of Materials Science. Vol. 3. Robert A. Huggins, Richard H. Bube, and Richard W. Roberts, Eds. Annual Reviews, Palo Alto, Calif., 1973. x, 484 pp., illus. $12.

Annual Review of Physical Chemistry. Vol. 24. H. Eyring, C. J. Christensen, and H. S. Johnston, Eds. Annual Reviews, Palo Alto, Calif., 1973. x, 546 pp., illus. $12.

Applied Statistics. Analysis of Variance and Regression. Olive J. Dunn and Virginia A. Clark. Wiley, New York, 1974. xii, 388 pp., illus. $17.95. Wiley Series in Probability and Mathematical Statistics.

Atlas of Texas. Stanley A. Arbingast and seven others. Bureau of Business Research, University of Texas, Austin, 1973. viii, 132 pp., illus. Spiral bound, $5.

The Behavioural Physiology of Animals and Man. Vol. 1. Erich von Holst. Translated from the German edition (Munich, 1969) by Robert Martin. University of Miami Press, Coral Gables, Fla., 1973. xiv, 342 pp., illus. $18.

Benzofurans. Ahmed Mustafa. Interscience (Wiley), New York, 1974. xviii, 514 pp., illus. $9.95. Chemistry of Heterocyclic Compounds, vol. 29.

Biology of Tetrahymena. Alfred M. Elliott, Ed. Dowden, Hutchinson, and Ross, Stroudsburg, Pa., 1973. x, 508 pp., illus. $35.

Black and White Self-Esteem. The Urban School Child. Morris Rosenberg and Roberta G. Simmons. American Sociological Association, Washington, D.C., 1972. Paper. Arnold M. and Caroline Rose Monograph Series.

The Butterflies of Southern California. Thomas C. Emmel and John F. Emmel. Natural History Museum of Los Angeles County, Los Angeles, 1973. xii, 148 pp., illus. Paper, $4. Science Series, No. 26.

Cartographic Design and Production. J. S. Keates. Halsted (Wiley), New York, 1973. xvi, 240 pp., illus. $24.95.

Chemical Kinetics. Homogeneous Reactions. N. M. Emanuel' and D. G. Knorre. Translated from the Russian edition (Moscow, 1969) by R. Kondor. Halsted (Wiley), New York, 1973. xii, 448 pp., illus. $18.95.

The Chemical Kinetics of Enzyme Action. Keith J. Laidler and Peter S. Bunting. Clarendon (Oxford University Press), New York, ed. 2, 1973. xii, 472 pp., illus. $41.75.

Climatic Geomorphology. Edward Derbyshire, Ed. Barnes and Noble, New York, 1973. 296 pp., illus. $15.

Colloid Science. Vol. 1. A Review of the Literature Published during 1970 and 1971. D. H. Everett, Senior Reporter. Chemical Society, London, 1973. viii, 264 pp., illus. £6.50. Specialist Periodical Reports.

Community Information Expositions. Issue-Oriented Displays and Popular Understanding of Social Problems. Thomas V. Vonier and Richard A. Scribner. American Association for the Advancement of Science, Washington, D.C., 1973. xii, 72 pp., illus. Paper.

Comparative Immunology of the Oral Cavity. Papers from a symposium, Philadelphia, Dec. 1971. Stephen E. Mergenhagen and Henry W. Scherp, Eds. National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Md., 1973 (available from the Superintendent of Documents, Washington, D.C.). viii, 236 pp., illus. $4.75.

Conscription, Protest, and Social Conflict. The Life and Death of a Draft Resistance Movement. Michael Useem. Wiley-Interscience, 1973. xxii, 330 pp., illus. $12.50.

The Cryopreservation of Normal and Neoplastic Cells. Proceedings of a conference, Villejuif, France, June 1973. Institut National de la Santé et de la Recherche Medicale, Paris, 1973. 218 pp., illus. Paper, 50 F.

Effect of Carbohydrates on Lipid Metabolism. I. Macdonald, Ed. Karger, Basel, 1973 (U.S. distributor, Phiebig, White Plains, N.Y.). x, 310 pp., illus. $52.35. Progress in Biochemical Pharmacology, vol. 8.

Electron Spin Resonance. Theory and Applications. N. M. Atherton. Ellis Horwood, Chichester, England, and Halsted (Wiley), New York, 1973. x, 438 pp., illus. $35. Ellis Horwood Series in Physical Chemistry.

Energy, Electric Power, and Man. Timothy J. Healy. Boyd and Fraser, San Francisco, 1974. xvi, 356 pp., illus. $9.95.

Energy Fluxes over Polar Surfaces. Proceedings of a symposium, Moscow, Aug. 1971. Sverre Orvig, Ed. World Meteorological Organization, Geneva, 1973. vi, 300 pp., illus. Paper, $35.50. Technical Note, No. 129.

Esperanza. An Ethnographic Study of a

Peasant Community in Puerto Rico. Carlos Buitrago Ortiz. University of Arizona Press, Tucson, 1973. xii, 218 pp., illus. Paper, $4.95. Viking Fund Publications in Anthropology, No. 50.

Essentials of Abnormal Psychology. Benjamin Kleinmuntz. Harper and Row, New York, 1973. xii, 590 pp., illus. $12.95.

Ethics in Medicine in a Changing Society. Proceedings of a symposium, Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 1973. Stacey B. Day, Ed. Bell Museum of Pathobiology, University of Minnesota Medical School, Minneapolis, 1973. viii, 72 pp. Cloth, $5.50; paper, $2.50.

Eyelids of Morning. The Mingled Destinies of Crocodiles and Men. Alistair Graham. Illustrations by Peter Beard. New York Graphic Society, Greenwich, Conn., 1974. 260 pp., illus. $22.50.

The Fine Structure of Cotton. An Atlas of Cotton Microscopy. Inez V. deGruy, Jarrell H. Carra, and Wilton R. Goynes. Robert T. O'Connor, Ed. Dekker, New York, 1973. xiv, 226 pp., illus. $3. Fiber Science Series, vol. 6.

Foundation Engineering for Difficult Subsoil Conditions. Leonardo Zeevaert. Van Nostrand Reinhold, New York, 1973. xviii, 652 pp., illus. $24.95.

Mechanics. N. C. Barford. Wiley, New York, 1973. xvi, 392 pp., illus. Cloth, $19.50; paper, $10.95.

Memories II. Julian Huxley. Harper and Row, New York, 1973. 270 pp. + plates. $8.95.

Mental Illness in Perspective. History and Schools of Thought. Robert A. Clark. Boxwood Press, Pacific Grove, Calif., 1973. vi, 106 pp. Cloth, $3.75; paper, $2.95.

Microbial Photosynthesis. June Lascelles, Ed. Dowden, Hutchinson and Ross, Stroudsburg, Pa., 1973. xiv, 402 pp., illus. $20. Benchmark Papers in Microbiology.

Migraine. The Evolution of a Common Disorder. Oliver Sacks. University of California Press, Berkeley, ed. 2, 1973. 220 pp., illus. Paper, $2.95.

Models for Environmental Pollution Control. Rolf A. Deininger, Ed. Ann Arbor Science Publishers, Inc., Ann Arbor, Mich., 1973. xii, 448 pp., illus. $24.50.

The Modern Concept of Nature. Essays on Theoretical Biology and Evolution. H. J. Muller. Elof Axel Carlson, Ed. State University of New York Press, Albany, 1973. xiv, 272 pp. Cloth, $8.95; paper, $4.95.

Morphogenesis of T-Even Bacteriophages. B. F. Poglazov. Karger, Basel, 1973 (U.S. distributor, Phiebig, White Plains, N.Y.). vi, 106 pp., illus. $19.65. Monographs in Developmental Biology, vol. 7.

Multivariate Analysis. Vol. 3. Proceedings of a symposium, Dayton, Ohio, June 1972. Paruchuri R. Krishnaiah, Ed. Academic Press, New York, 1973. xviii, 410 pp., illus. $36.

Music and Society. The Later Writings of Paul Honigsheim. K. Peter Etzkorn, Ed. Wiley-Interscience, New York, 1973. xxii, 328 pp. $14.95.

Nature in the Round. A Guide to Environmental Science. Nigel Calder, Ed. (Continued on page 200)