Interdisciplinary Research Design Project on AMERICAN VALUES AND HUMAN HABITATION

The American Association for the Advancement of Science invites nominations of promising U.S. and Canadian scholars, of faculty rank or equivalent, in the humanities, the social and natural sciences, and engineering (including architecture and city planning) for membership in a 12-person interdisciplinary group which will design a major research agenda on American Values and Human Habitation. The project group will meet in Washington, D.C., from 14 June through 24 July 1976. Travel and living expenses and a fellowship grant-in-aid will be paid to all participants.

It is anticipated that an exploration of the value content of the habitat topic by the group will serve to focus attention on a number of fundamental issues concerning the interrelationships between science and values.

Interested persons should request that a letter of nomination be submitted to AAAS from established scholars in their disciplines or from recognized experts in some aspect of the habitat topic. Candidates should be prepared to submit written materials in support of their nominations, and should provide evidence of a capability for and a commitment to the development of interdisciplinary research methodologies in the area of science and values. However, it is not necessary that they be expert in a field of scholarly inquiry related to the habitat topic.

The deadline for completed applications is 16 January 1976. Nomination materials and requests for detailed information regarding application procedures should be sent to:
