

search areas: resistance adaptations, respiration and energetics, water and ions, reproduction and development, and perception of the environment. The longest paper in the book is the first one, a review of adaptations of phytoplankton to estuarine conditions. The paper discusses individual factors as well as their interactions and summarizes the consequences of pollution to these organisms. The following paper deals specifically with the effects of mercury as a pollutant, stressing the care needed to experiment with a substance that is lost from experimental vessels by volatilization. Another paper deals with salinity resistance of a copepod. The paper I find most interesting is by B. L. Umringer on the resistance to low temperatures of the killifish, Fundulus heteroclitus. These marsh minnows are subject to potentially damaging low temperatures in winter, usually only for relatively short intervals in very cold weather. They bury themselves in the mud at the bottom of marsh creeks and are thus protected from the danger of contact with ice but not from supercooling, since their blood osmolarity protects them only to -0.8°C even when the mud reaches -1.5°C . Killifish protect themselves (as do many other temperate fishes) by increasing only the concentration of glucose in their blood serum. Serum glucose increases not at all between 20°C and 4°C , slightly at 2°C , but sixfold when temperatures drop below zero. The sugar is mobilized from liver glycogen through a mechanism that starts with hypertrophy of glucagon-containing alpha cells in pancreatic islets. The elevation of glycagon in the blood inhibits glycogen synthetase and increases the activity of hepatic glycogen phosphorylase, leading to increased serum glucose. Though it is unable to prevent freezing if the fish's blood is seeded with ice crystals, the mechanism provides rapidly adjustable protection against freezing caused by the spontaneous formation of ice, and the protection can be rapidly removed when it is no longer needed. It is an efficient mini-antifreeze system that provides protection for short periods against temperatures slightly below freezing.

The volume contains 20 papers and a summary and ranges over subjects from adaptations in halophytes to color discrimination by fiddler crabs. I found the three papers on fish most interesting. Others will favor other aspects of this very diverse collection.

JOHN TEAL

Woods Hole Oceanographic Institution, Woods Hole, Massachusetts

Symbiotic Associations

Symbiosis. Papers from a symposium. Published for the Society for Experimental Biology by Cambridge University Press, New York, 1975. viii, 634 pp., illus. + plates. $47.50. Symposia of the Society for Experimental Biology, No. 29.

Understanding a single organism that is grown in the laboratory is difficult enough; when a symbiotic association is being studied, the complexity increases tremendously. There is great need to appreciate various symbioses because they play an important role in ecology, nutrition, disease, and agriculture. This book points out what is known about many important symbiotic systems, and a general appreciation of techniques used and work that must yet be done is gained from reading it.

There are 24 contributions from experts in bacteriology, zoology, biochemistry, and botany. Most of the chapters are well written, but quite a few undefined technical terms are used that probably are not going to be understood by most readers. The arrangement of chapters helps inexperienced readers to appreciate the simpler systems before wading into the more complex symbioses.

The book begins with an attempt to define "symbiosis," and then a scheme for classifying different symbioses is discussed. Three chapters present a stimulating discussion of the strong and weak points of several theories of the evolution of eukaryotic organelles.

Two symbionts of Paramecium—the kappa factor and Chlorella—are discussed in detail. There are several other chapters that deal with the "borrowing" of a photosynthetic apparatus by an organism that normally is not photosynthetic. Examples include the hydra and certain mollusks. The marine flatworm has an association with certain algae that permits the flatworm to obtain most of its carbon from carbon dioxide in the presence of light. Fungal diseases of plants are covered and there is also discussion of the nematode-plant association. It seems that in certain situations the nematode can actually help the plant. There is a fine chapter on lichens.

Other topics include the Protozoa-red blood-cell association (as in malaria), the way certain parasites evade the immune response, the way the tapeworm interacts with the host, and the crucial role of bacteria in the ruminant animal. There is an interesting chapter on nitrogen-fixing and methane-forming bacteria in the termite gut. The last chapter is quite different from the rest, since it deals solely with behavioral relationships among different marine animals.

There are many excellent light and electron micrographs in the book. A general biologist as well as an expert in just about any biological field should be able to gain a lot from it. The book points out the need for a great deal of work and imagination on the many important problems involving intimate interactions between organisms. I hope it will stimulate some readers to undertake this kind of research.

WINSTON J. BRILL

Department of Bacteriology and Center for Studies of Nitrogen Fixation, University of Wisconsin, Madison

Quantized Fields

Introduction to Axiomatic Quantum Field Theory. N. N. BOGOLUBOV, A. A. LOGUNOV, and I. T. TODOROV. Translated from the Russian edition (Moscow, 1969) by Stephen A. Fulling and Ludmila G. Popova. Stephen A. Fulling, Ed. Benjamin, Reading, Mass., 1975. xxviii, 708 pp. $32.50. Mathematical Physics Monograph Series, vol. 18.

As the title suggests, this book provides the reader with an overview of those aspects of quantum field theory that have been placed on a rigorous mathematical basis. This is an area in which two excellent books already exist: R. F. Streater and A. S. Wightman's PCT, Spin and Statistics, and All That (Benjamin, 1964) and R. Jost's The General Theory of Quantized Fields (American Mathematical Society, 1965). These books present stiff competition. The first is a model of clarity of exposition in mathematical physics, and the second, though terse, is full of interesting material. The book under review nicely complements these two classics. The simplest description of it is as encyclopedic—it is about twice as long as the Jost's and Streater and Wightman's books put together. I would recommend it strongly to the student or particle physicist who wants a second book after reading one of the classics.

The book is quite well written, and it is nice to see various subjects—for example, the Haag-Ruelle scattering theory—treated exhaustively. But the book is occasionally too exhaustive. For example, there is an appendix that attempts to give the reader a quick course on topological groups, Lie groups, and Lie algebras in 25 pages. This kind of blitzkrieg can be sloppy. For example, on p. 210 "simple Lie group" is defined so as to exclude nontrivial invariant subgroups, with a later remark on p. 233 about the more usual definition allowing discrete subgroups. The reader is then told on p. 211 that $SO(n)$ is not simple for $n = 4$ but is simple for $n = 3$ or $n \geq 5$. The truth is that with the definition given on p. 210 $SO(n)$ is simple only for odd n and the assertion on p. 211 is true only with the definition referred to on p. 223. The inclusion of this kind of material, which is not really central to the theme, seems to me to be a lapse in an otherwise commendable book.

The book has been extensively updated and expanded in translation, in consultation with one of the authors. Use has been made of recent developments to improve a variety of proofs compared to the classic ones. The example that comes to mind immediately is the use of the ideas of Bros, Epstein, and Glaser to develop the theory of Laplace transforms of distributions supported in cones. The book also gives an admirable review of the status of constructive quantum field theory in early 1972. There has, however, been a revolution of approach and results since then, and this review, which could have been very useful if it had appeared earlier, is clearly dated. (It should be emphasized that this is the only seriously dated material in the book.) The manuscript of the translation was finished in 1972, and it is a shame that publication was delayed.

BARRY SIMON

*Department of Physics,
Princeton University,
Princeton, New Jersey*

Books Received

Geochemistry of Boron. C. T. Walker, Ed. Dowden, Hutchinson and Ross, Stroudsburg, Pa., 1976 (distributor, Halsted [Wiley], New York). xviii, 414 pp., illus. $35. Benchmark Papers in Geology, vol. 23.

Information Revolution. Proceedings of a meeting, Boston, Oct. 1975. American Society for Information Science, Washington, D.C., 1975. x, 170 pp. Paper, $17.50; to members, $14; to affiliates, $15.75. Proceedings of the ASIS Annual Meeting, vol. 12.

Information Roundup. Proceedings of a meeting, Portland, Ore., May 1975. Frances G. Spigai, Theodore C. W. Grams, and Julie Kawabata, Eds. American Society for Information Science, Washington, D.C., 1975. iv, 180 pp. Paper, $14; to members, $11.20; to affiliates, $12.60.

An Intellectual History of Psychology. Daniel N. Robinson. Macmillan, New York, and Collier Macmillan, London, 1976. xiv, 434 pp. $13.95.

International Stratigraphic Guide. A Guide to Stratigraphic Classification, Terminology, and Procedure. Hollis D. Hedberg, Ed.

Wiley-Interscience, New York, 1976. xx, 200 pp., illus. $9.50.

Introduction Bibliographique à l'Histoire de la Biologie. L'Association pour l'Histoire des Sciences de la Nature, Muséum National d'Histoire Naturelle, Paris, 1975. 196 pp. Paper, 35 F. Histoire et Nature, fascicules 3-4, 1974-1975.

Introduction to Computer Science. P. M. Banks and J. R. Douppnik. Wiley, New York, 1976. xvi, 362 pp., illus. $13.95.

Introduction to Electronics. H. Alex Romanowicz and Russell E. Puckett. Wiley, New York, ed. 2, 1976. xviii, 532 pp., illus. $14.95.

Laboratory Experiments in Physiology. Alan Grinnell and Albert A. Barber. Mosby, St. Louis, ed. 9, 1976. xvi, 200 pp., illus. Paper, $6.50.

Lasers. A Series of Advances. Vol. 4. Albert K. Levine and Anthony J. DeMaria, Eds. Dekker, New York, 1976. xii, 330 pp., illus. $29.75.

Lipids, Lipoproteins, and Drugs. Proceedings of a symposium, Milan, Sept. 1974. David Kritchevsky, Rodolfo Paoletti, and William L. Holmes, Eds. Plenum, New York, 1975. xii, 516 pp., illus. $39.50. Advances in Experimental Medicine and Biology, vol. 63.

Lung Metabolism. Proteolysis and Antiproteolysis, Biochemical Pharmacology, Handling of Bioactive Substances. Proceedings of a symposium, Davos, Switzerland, Oct. 1974. Alain F. Junod and Rodolphe de Haller, Eds. Academic Press, New York, 1976. xiv, 502 pp., illus. $24.

Markets in Oaxaca. Papers from a symposium, Tucson, Ariz., Apr. 1971. Scott Cook and Martin Diskin, Eds. University of Texas Press, Austin, 1976. xx, 330 pp., illus. $9.95.

Megalithic Software. Part 1, England. L. B. Borst and B. M. Borst. Twin Bridge Press, Williamsville, N.Y., 1975. xii, 202 pp., illus. $8.

Microencapsulation. Papers from a symposium, London. J. R. Nixon, Ed. Dekker, New York, 1976. xii, 216 pp., illus. $19.50. Drugs and the Pharmaceutical Sciences, vol. 3.

New Developments in Separation Methods. Eli Grushka, Ed. Dekker, New York, 1976. viii, 246 pp., illus. $23.50. Reprinted from Separation Science, vols. 9 and 10.

New Health Practitioners. Proceedings of a conference, Bethesda, Md., May 1974. Robert L. Kane, Ed. National Institutes of Health, Bethesda, Md., 1975. xviii, 156 pp. Fogarty International Center Series on the Teaching of Preventive Medicine, vol. 1. DHEW Publication No. (NIH) 75-875.

Nitrogen and Phosphorus. Food Production, Waste and the Environment. Keith S. Porter, Ed. Ann Arbor Science Publishers, Ann Arbor, Mich., 1975. xii, 372 pp., illus. $20.

Organic Chemistry. Vol. 2, Stereochemistry and the Chemistry of Natural Products. I. L. Finar. Longman, New York, ed. 5, 1975. xiv, 942 pp., illus. $21.50.

Organic Phosphorus Compounds. Vol. 7. G. M. Kosolapoff and L. Maier. Wiley-Interscience, New York, 1976. viii, 872 pp., illus. $38.50.

Our Finite Mineral Resources. Stephen E. Kesler. McGraw-Hill, New York, 1976. viii, 120 pp., illus. Paper, $3.95. McGraw-Hill Earth Science Paperback Series.

Outer Space and Inner Sanctums. Government, Business, and Satellite Communication. Michael E. Kinsley. Wiley-Interscience, New York, 1976. xvi, 280 pp. $11.50.

The Papers of Joseph Henry. Vol. 2, November 1832-December 1835, The Princeton Years. Nathan Reingold, Arthur P. Molella, and Michele L. Aldrich, Eds., with the assistance of James M. Hobbins and Kathleen Waldenfels. Smithsonian Institution Press, Washington, D.C., 1975 (distributor, Braziller, New York). xl, 524 pp. $30.

The Persistent Poppy. A Computer-Aided Search for Heroin Policy. Gilbert Levin, Edward B. Roberts, and Gary B. Hirsch. Ballinger (Lippincott), Cambridge, Mass., 1975. xvi, 232 pp., illus. $13.50.

Personality Theory. The Personological Tradition. Robert Hogan. Prentice-Hall, Englewood Cliffs, N.J., 1976. xvi, 224 pp. Paper, $5.95. The Prentice-Hall Series in Personality.

Phagocytic Engulfment and Cell Adhesiveness as Cellular Surface Phenomena. Carel J. van Oss, Cetewayo F. Gillman, and A. Wilhelm Neumann. Dekker, New York, 1975. x, 160 pp., illus. $19.50. Microorganisms and Infectious Diseases, 2.

Photoperiodism in Plants. Daphne Vince-Prue. McGraw-Hill, New York, 1975. xiv, 444 pp., illus. $30. European Plant Biology Series.

Physics. Paul A. Tipler. Worth, New York, 1976. xxviii, 1026 pp., illus. $18.95. Study Guide. Granvil C. Kyker, Jr. x, 346 pp., illus. Paper, $4.50. Instructor's Manual. Granvil C. Kyker, Jr., and four others. vi, 190 pp., illus. Paper.

Proceedings of the International Symposium on Atomic, Molecular and Solid-State Theory and Quantum Statistics. Sanibel Island, Fla., Jan. 1975. Per-Olov Löwdin, Ed. Interscience (Wiley), New York, 1976. xxvi, 584 pp., illus. Paper, $25. International Journal of Quantum Chemistry Symposium No. 9.

Proceedings of the International Symposium on Quantum Biology and Quantum Pharmacology. Sanibel Island, Fla., Jan. 1975. Per-Olov Löwdin. Interscience (Wiley), New York, 1976. xiv, 348 pp., illus. Paper, $25. International Journal of Quantum Chemistry Quantum Biology Symposium No. 2.

Proceedings of the Third International Conference on the Mycoses. São Paulo, Brazil, Aug. 1974. Pan American Health Organization, Washington, D.C., 1975. x, 266 pp., illus. Paper, $10. Scientific Publication No. 304.

Progress in Inorganic Chemistry. Vol. 21. Papers from a symposium, Los Angeles, Apr. 1974. Stephen J. Lippard, Ed. Interscience (Wiley), New York, 1976. x, 294 pp., illus. $22.50.

Recreation in the Countryside. A Spatial Analysis. J. T. Coppock and B. S. Duffield. St. Martin, New York, 1975. xii, 262 pp., illus. $18.95.

Saqqara. The Royal Cemetery of Memphis. Excavations and Discoveries Since 1850. Jean-Philippe Lauer. Scribner, New York, 1976. 248 pp., illus. $25.

Schizophrenia. A Developmental Analysis. Sidney J. Blatt and Cynthia M. Wild. Academic Press, New York, 1976. xiv, 274 pp. $16.50.

Social Concerns. Gwynn Nettler. McGraw-Hill, New York, 1975. viii, 360 pp. Paper, $6.95.

Soil Micro-Organisms. T. R. G. Gray and S. T. Williams. Longman, New York, 1975. viii, 240 pp. + plates. Paper, $11. Reprint of the 1971 edition. University Reviews in Botany, 2.

Weathering. Cliff Ollier. K. M. Clayton, Ed. Longman, New York, ed. 2, 1975. viii, 304 pp., illus. Paper, $13.50. Geomorphology Texts, 2.