MEMORIAL TO CHARLES W. HARGITT

THE former students of Charles W. Hargitt recently gave expression to their appreciation of his work and their acknowledgment of his influence in their lives by the presentation of a bronze tablet to Syracuse University and its erection in the Natural History Building. In outlining their plans it was stated:

When a man gives himself worthily to a Great Cause, there is reason for taking note of him. When he gives his whole life there is reason for remembering him. When he gives both his life and services of high order, there is reason for honoring him. Charles W. Hargitt became associated with Syracuse University in 1891, he died just before the Commencement of 1927. Thirty-six years of continuous service! Active and earnest until the last! He deserves to be honored by those of us who were students with him and came to know him. We were influenced by him. In the spirit of a teacher he gave freely to us.

As a result of this plan there was made a bronze tablet of simple and dignified design suitably inscribed; this was presented and dedicated on November 17, 1928. In the entrance lobby of the Natural History Building, the plans of which he supervised, and in which he worked for so many years, gathered many old students, colleagues from the faculties, representatives of the trustees and of the citizens of Syracuse; on the wall of the lobby was the memorial. With brief and simple words this was presented and accepted. Chancellor Flint in accepting said:

On behalf of the trustees of Syracuse University I accept from the former students of Charles W. Hargitt this simple and dignified and therefore fitting memorial to a great and inspiring teacher. The world knows no higher title than this and experiences no higher service. His spiritual immortality is even more vivid for us, paralleled as it is by the way he lives on in the lives and activities of those who, while his pupils, were also his colleagues.

The tablet is inscribed as follows:
